Class member David Anderson says, "We're amateur photographers who like the challenge of taking an image and using the available software to enhance or modify the image in some way to create a pleasing picture. It also gets us out and about at all times in the year, meeting people and seeing different parts of the country".

Each member of the group will submit a selection of chosen work resulting in an eclectic mix of approaches and aesthetic and formal decision making.

May 6 - June 17

Polly Pentreath

A graduate from the Glasgow School of Art 2019, Painting and Printmaking Department, Polly's practice is centred on a meeting between the real and the imaginary through dream narratives and cinematic aesthetics. She collects imagery from books, film and mythology, among other sources, to suggest ambiguous narratives reminiscent of film stills. Much of this is concerned with the transience of postmodern architecture: the offices and hotel chains that are as anonymous as they are universally familiar. Surrealist film and literature informs much of Polly's practice. Through painting she aims to expand space(s) into dreamscapes and show a reality warped by the imaginary.

Charlie Yates

A recent graduate of Glasgow School of Art, Charlie is now based in Glasgow and Edinburgh. His work is made up of observations and partially recalled places, objects and memories in the form of sketches, photographs and verbal recordings. He attempts to re-contextualize these experiences, the fragmented nature of memory is suggested within his paintings.

Through recent research, he discovered Lambay a private island off the East coast of Dublin. On a trip to the island he came across an abandoned 'Real' tennis court and the desolate nature of this space heightened his own sense of isolation. A burgeoning interest in this unusual place stimulated an extended body of work, some of which we are fortunate to have on display in North Lanarkshire.
